

لأسنان لامعة كحبات الألماس "Diamoneer"

Many celebrities resort to expensive and possibly unusual cosmetic surgeries. While Kate Middleton, Victoria Beckham and Gwyneth Paltrow are among the famous people who like to use bee venom for the face, their skin usually looks flawless. Others chose snail slips as a common ingredient in many cosmetic procedures. Some specialists claim to be a powerful moisturizer and also have anti-aging properties. It also helps people get rid of hyperpigmentation and impurities. Sounds like a miracle cure, doesn't it? Anyway - the latest in the world of beauty is diamonds... Women resort to all kinds of treatments that include "diamonds" from facial peeling products to body care products, and now also teeth - to achieve the perfect desired smile. Diamonds may look great on the ring, but they can also make wonders for your skin.

The latest dental trend for the wealthy is Diamoneer. Dr. Sargon Lazarof (based in Los Angeles) clearly dominates the innovative cosmetic dental field that created Diamoneers... It is a dental shell but it is not normal but blends diamond dust with its formula to add a flash to your smile. His patients are Hollywood celebrities, Fortune 500 company directors and members of royal families. Dr. Sargon Lazarof, the creator and inventor of the first immediate dental replacement system approved by the Food and Drug Administration, making a giant leap in the future, pioneered just a few years after graduating from the University Of Southern California School Of Dentistry -- nearly thirty years ago. Diamoneer is a patented and copyrighted process used by Dr. Lazarof to create flawless smiles using high-quality materials and techniques. What distinguishes this process is that "Diamoneers" can mix diamond dust with porcelain, to add this special sparkle to the smile where it captures certain light angles. This process is customized for each patient to ensure that they get the smile of their dreams, and this cosmetic treatment is available for the well-off enough to afford it.
